

My name is Matthew Farber and I am from Long Island, New York. I have enjoyed playing ice hockey since I was 7 and am a die-hard Rangers fan. I also love snowboarding in Vermont every winter with my family. Additionally, I enjoy sailing and am on the racing team here. Similar to you, I am also interested in music and just finished a sound design class last semester, and I am interested to see the ways that computer science can be integrated into making music. I became interested in computer science after taking a few weekend coding classes at Hofstra University and have wanted to major in computer science ever since. I hope to learn a lot about the inner workings of the data behind the code I write, and especially about how to use data structures to improve optimization. Also, I just finished the 141 section of computer science and I am looking forward to building towards my computer science major.
